HOME TO THE GRAVE

Gov. Clinton's Remains Are Moved to Native State.

MILITARY HONORS ACCORDED

Daughters of the Revolution Crown Casket with Wreaths as It Is Put Aboard Train for New York—Body to Be Buried in Kingston Churchyard Saturday—Civic Bodies Attend.The host of heraldry, the pomp of power, And all that beauty, all that wealth e'er gave,
Await alike the inevitable hour.
The paths of glory lead but to the grave.
—Gray's Elegy.

Under circumstances probably more auspicious and elaborate than were ever before accorded a citizen of the United States, unless it was one of its Presidents, the body of Gen. George De Witt Clinton, at one time Vice President of the United States and first governor of the State of New York, was yesterday removed from the chapel in the Congressional Cemetery, where it has reposed for nearly 100 years, and started on the journey to its last resting place, Kingston, N. Y., his former home, where he will sleep among his kin and in the soil to which he was native.

It would be almost impossible to conceive a more magnificent pageant than that which escorted the remains of Gen.
Clinton to the Union Station, and the honors there were such that a mere pen could not describe them.

According to the programme of arrangements the cortege was to leave the Congressional Cemetery at 11 o'clock. Just opposite the north gate of the cemetery there is a large vacant plot of ground.
Promptly on time the troops that were ordered to take part in the escort began swinging into the common. Cavalry, artillery, infantry, marines, and jacksies tramped over the sward and formed in line.

Colors Draped with Crepe.
One might have thought that the formation was arrayed for battle, for the bayonets gleamed, the guns glistened, and the sabers flashed against the sunlight in a rather menacing manner. That it was an errand of devotion, loyalty, and peace was shown, however, by the crepe which mounted colors carried by the troops.

The streets leading toward the gate of the cemetery were thronged by thousands, and it was almost impossible for the police and soldiers to keep the crowd back. Only those bearing invitations and the members of the guard of honor from New York were allowed within the cemetery.

The body of Gen. Clinton, in a shipping case of mahogany, rested before the altar of the little chapel in which eulogies over the remains of many noted men have been pronounced.

A few minutes before the hour appointed for the cortege to move Rev. Rowell Hoes, a chaplain in the United States navy, and through whose efforts the exhumation and transfer of the remains was principally done, addressed the crowd of honor sent by the State of New York to receive the body. He devoted his remarks to the life of the man whose remains he was about to bury.

Owing to the fact that Gen. Bell, Chief of Staff of the United States army, did not arrive in time to start the parade, there was a slight delay, and it was almost noon before the cortege moved.

The body of Gen. Clinton was taken from the chapel by eight marines. The guard of honor formed a hollow square, flanked on either side by policemen. Inside of the square, the marines carrying the casket walked with measured tread.
The walk from the chapel to the gates was over a macadam road, on either side of which gigantic maples reared their height, and their ample foliage lent a most welcome shade to the relentless rays of the sun.

Caisson Draped in Black.
At the gate stood a caisson heavily draped in crepe and drawn by six horses.
Beyond it were the soldiers, marines, and the various branches of army and civic life, come to pay homage to all that was mortal of Gen. De Witt Clinton.

As the caisson was placed upon the caisson, the buglers sounded the "General's March." A moment later the Marine Band, under the direction of Lieut. Santelmann, played "Nearer, My God, to Thee." While the strains were floating through the air the solemn echoes of minute guns began to resound. As these died away the hoarse orders of command were heard, and in a second the body of men, who had stood at attention, at arms present, as the body of Gen. Clinton was placed on the caisson, began to move. The order of formation was:

1. Maj. Gen. J. Franklin Bell, Maj. Gen. William P.
Dauvergne, General Staff Corps, chief of staff; Lieut.
Col. Benjamin Alvord, Adjutant General's Department; U. S. A. adjutant general, Capt. Fred W.
Sladen, General Staff Corps, aid-de-camp; Capt.
P. D. Leach, General Staff Corps, aid-de-camp; First Lieut. F. C. McDonald, United States Marine Corps, aid-de-camp.

2. Col. Charles A. F. Hatfield, Thirtieth Cavalry; United States Coast Artillery, Marine Band, four companies United States marines, one company seamen from United States steamship Mayflower, detachments: Hospital Corps, U. S. A.; Batteries D and E, Third Field Artillery; Troops E, G, and H, Thirtieth United States Cavalry; Col. M. B.
Clapp, commanding Washington High School Cadets, and staff; Engineer Band, regiment High School Cadets, Troop F, Thirtieth United States Cavalry; clergy, caisson bearing the body of Vice President Clinton, escorted by twelve representatives of patriotic societies; descendants of Vice President Clinton and their official representatives, Rev. Rowell H. Hoes, chaplain, U. S. N., a committee from the city of Kingston, N. Y., representative of the President of the United States; Board of Commissioners of the District of Columbia, Board of Trade and Chamber of Commerce of the District of Columbia, and patriotic societies and delegations of citizens.

Civic Organizations Attend.
The civic representatives were in carriages, and almost every patriotic society and commercial organization in the city was represented. The line of march was:
Congressional Cemetery, westward on E street to E street and Pennsylvania avenue; thence on Pen-sylvania avenue and B street to New Jersey avenue, thence northward, passing the east front of the Capitol to Delaware, Massachusetts avenues, and to the Union Station.

As the troops swung into Delaware avenue they lined on either side of the street, reaching from Massachusetts avenue to the Union Station.

At the latter point the Daughters of the American Revolution, with the Woman's Relief Corps, G. A. R., and other women's patriotic societies, all garbed in white, were gathered to meet the body.

Mrs. Isabella Ball, former commander of the Relief Corps, and Mrs. Hodgkins had charge of the arrangements of the station ceremonies.

Women Crown the Casket.
The caisson bearing the body was halted about fifty feet from the south entrance to the station, and the women of the various patriotic societies, dressed in white and carrying American flags, filed past. Mrs. Ball and Mrs. Gadsby placed wreaths on the casket, and it was then placed on the shoulders of the eight marines who acted as pallbearers, and taken into the main waiting room of the station.
This committee, representing Mrs. Donald McLean, president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, was composed of the following ladies:

Mrs. Ellen Spencer Musser, Mrs. Charlotte Emmer, Mrs. Elizabeth Rowe, Mrs. Isabel G.
Swornstedt, Mrs. J. Eakin Gadsby, Mrs. John Paul Earnest, Mrs. Anna G. Draper, Mrs. E. F. Noble, and Mrs. Dr. Rose.

Placed on Private Car.
The body was taken to the private car Olympic, and accompanied by the honor escort from New York, started for that State at 3 p. m., the car being attached to the regular Pennsylvania train.

Owing to the size and weight of the shipping case, it was impossible to get the body inside of the car, and it rested on the rear platform, though well under the canopy, during the trip.

The guard of honor from New York was composed of D. G. Atkins, S. D.
Coyndall, A. D. Clearwater, Herbert Carl, Maj. James H. Everette, and B.
M. Brink.

The body reached New York last night, and was there received by the adjutant general of the State, representing Gov. Hughes. It was conveyed to the city hall, where it lay in state until this morning. Then it will be placed upon the New York State naval vessel Wasp and conveyed by a naval flotilla ordered by the Secretary of the Navy, to Kingston. On Saturday the body will be laid to rest in the First Dutch Churchyard, at Kingston.

By one of those peculiar circumstances of fate, the man who, acting as adjutant health officer of the District, Harry Clay McLean, whose grandfather was the first commissary general appointed by Gov. Clinton, issued the permit for the exhumation of the body of Gen. Clinton and also acted as an escort for the body, with his son.

POUNDMASTER GETS BUSY.

Extra Wagons Placed in Service to Corral Stray Dogs.
Commissioner Macfarland said yesterday that ever since the large number of stray dogs was reported a few months ago, the Commissioner had had in operation an extra pound wagon and a pound wagon wagon, maintained out of the emergency fund, disposing of these dogs. Much has been accomplished in this way. The practicability of muzzling, he said, was disproved in 1900, as the stray animals—the really dangerous ones—were not provided against thereby. Therefore the stray animals must be put out of the way.

Report of the health department of the operations of the pound from January 30 to date shows 2,070 dogs to have been impounded, 314 redeemed by their owners, 40 sold, and 1,928 killed. From now until about July 1st the extra wagon will work every day.

CODE FOR DISTRICT LAWS.

Bill Drawn by Commissioners Forwarded to House Committee.

A joint resolution to create a commission to prepare a municipal code for the District of Columbia has been framed by the Commissioners and forwarded to the House District Committee with a recommendation for its early enactment. There is a strong need of such a code of laws in the District, owing to the complex sources of our municipal laws. Many of the ordinances and laws of former municipal governments in the District are still valid, while others have been abrogated. The code of laws relating to local matters are yet wholly or largely in effect. To compile these in such a way as to eliminate obsolete provisions and retain those which are desirable and consistent, and suggest useful additional legislation will require that the work be done by persons learned in the local municipal law and familiar with its application.

It is suggested, therefore, that the work be done by three members of the bar of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, who shall receive the sum of $1,000 for their services.

Special Squadron's Itinerary.

The proposed itinerary of the special service squadron, consisting of the battle ships Maine and Alabama, which have been detached from the Atlantic fleet, was issued by the Navy Department yesterday. The two vessels will leave San Francisco, in advance of the fleet, on June 8, for Manila, touching at Honolulu and Guam. On the return stops will be made at Singapore, Colombo, Aden, Suez, Ismailia, Naples, Gibraltar, and Horta, the squadron arriving at Hampton Roads on October 22. The longest stop, ten days, will be made at Naples.

TRUSTEES TO GIVE CONSENT.

Conditions Imposed by Commissioners in Bill Incorporating Asylum.

In reporting to Congress on the bill to incorporate St. Vincent's Orphan Asylum, the Commissioners reply favorably on the measure, except in the clause which states, "any such child or children shall not be withdrawn from the home or asylum without the consent of the board of trustees aforesaid, until they shall have reached the age of eighteen years."

They say that it is doubtful whether any institution should be given such control over children without the intervention of a court.

It is usual for institutions of this character to be authorized to receive and provide for children under rules and regulations prescribed by the management; but it is not usual to authorize such institutions to keep any child or children against the will of parents or friends, without the approval of some court of competent jurisdiction.

MRS. SCOTT PROSTRATED.

Declares She Has Been Persecuted and Will Prove It.

Mrs. Louise Scott was prostrated yesterday as a result of her conviction in the Police Court on the day before. She says she is innocent of any wrongdoing, and that she is being persecuted.

As soon as she is able to leave her bed, Mrs. Scott asserts, she will take steps looking toward the prosecution for perjury on the part of the witnesses. She will also make an effort to have the case reopened, and in another trial she fully expects acquittal.

Her strongest claim to consideration of the court is the fact, as she claims, that the witness who testified against her had previously informed District Attorney Baker and others that Mrs. Scott had not received the hat from Mrs. Hefen and Mme. Rose when it was delivered by a messenger boy. A servant in the house, she says, received the hat and flowers, and when Mrs. Scott also asserts, had previous to the trial exonerated Mrs. Scott from all responsibility.

On the stand, however, the servant put the blame on Mrs. Scott, who asserts the trial was conducted hastily and without preparation. She claims, furthermore, that she had not been notified in regard to the trial of the case, and that on one occasion judgment had been taken against her by default.

Mrs. Scott says she has been the victim of a great wrong, which must be righted.

PROF. RIVOT HONORED.

French Government Bestows Decoration on High School Educator.

Because of the merits of his poetry, the French government, through M. Jusserand, the French Ambassador, has bestowed the distinction of the decoration of officer d'academie on Prof. Charles G.
Rivot, of the Eastern High School. It is said that not more than five or six persons in the United States have been given this honor. It is awarded for literary work, and is regarded by teachers as a great distinction.

Prof. Rivot has published fifteen French poems, in epic, tragic, and pastoral verse, which have attracted wide attention.
